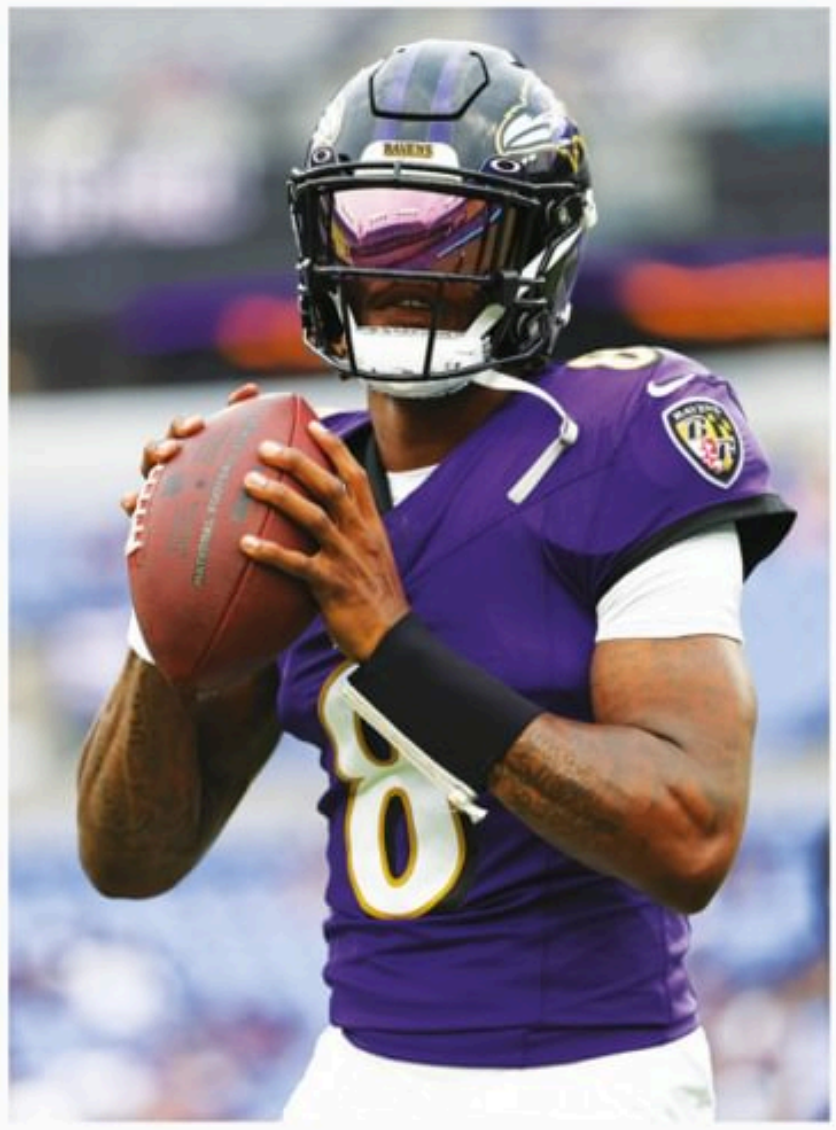
QUARTER-BACKS

A TRIO OF DUAL-THREAT OPTIONS AT THE TOP OF THE RANKINGS LEAD THE POSITION THAT HAS MORE FANTASY DEPTH THAN ANY OTHER HEADING INTO THE 2026 REGULAR SEASON



QB 1

JOSH ALLEN

BUFFALO BILLS

Allen remains the most consistent, prolific, two-way quarterback in the game, even if his numbers have dipped slightly each of the last two years. Expect a revival under new head coach Joe Brady, especially with the addition of WR D.J. Moore giving Allen the No. 1 target the Bills have lacked in each of the last two seasons.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Bills	17	112	579	5.2	34.1	14

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
460	319	69.3	3,668	8.0	215.8	25	10

QB 2

LAMAR JACKSON

BALTIMORE RAVENS

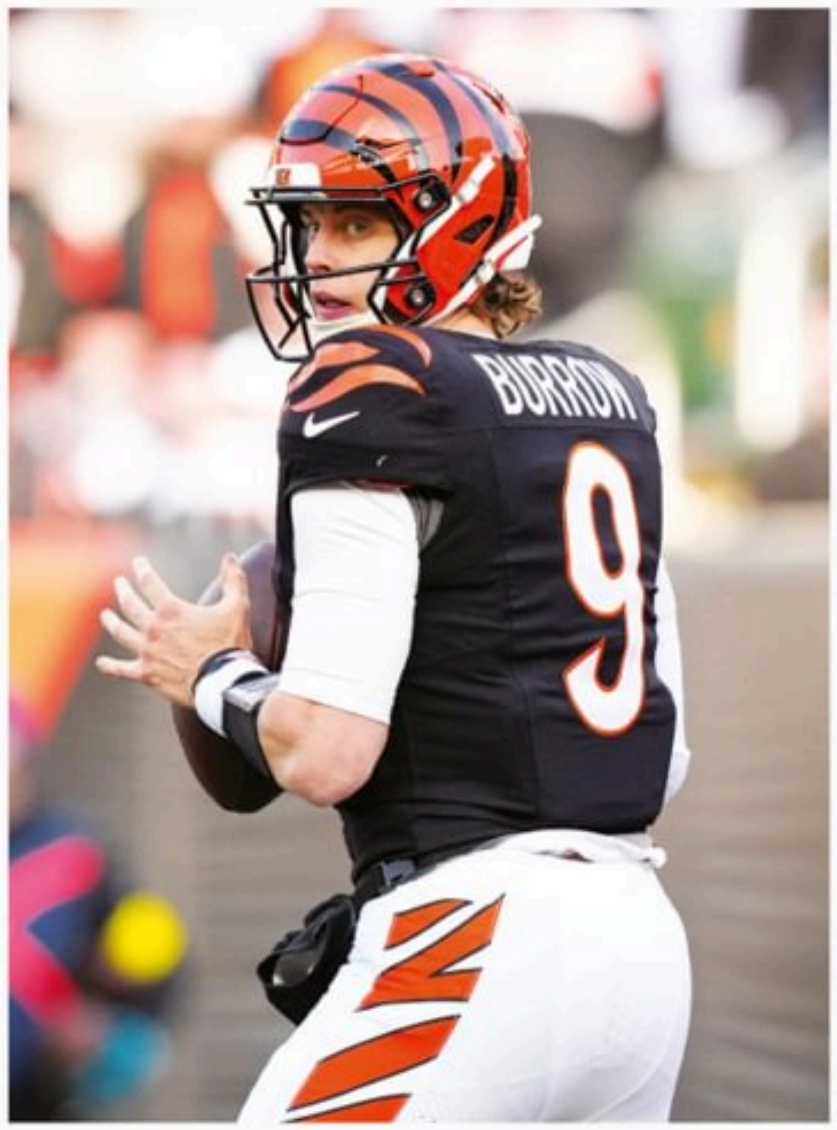
Ignore last season's numbers, because Jackson never fully recovered from an early hamstring injury and was battered throughout 2025. Last time he was healthy, in 2024, he threw for 4,172 yards and 41 touchdowns while running for 915 yards and four touchdowns. No other NFL quarterback can do that.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Ravens	13	67	349	5.2	26.8	2

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
302	192	63.6	2,549	8.4	196.1	21	7



QB 3

DRAKE MAYE

NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS

His second NFL season marked Maye's arrival as elite, and it wasn't just the soft schedule. He was electric as a passer and a runner, and still clutch enough to drag the Patriots to the Super Bowl behind a leaky offensive line. Improvement there, plus adding steady wide receiver Romeo Doubs, can only help Maye's ascension.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Patriots	17	103	450	4.4	26.5	4

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
492	354	72.0	4,394	8.9	258.5	31	8

QB 4

JOE BURROW

CINCINNATI BENGALS

Two out of the last three seasons were ruined by injuries. But wow, what a season Burrow had in between those two (4,918 passing yards with 43 touchdown passes in 2024). He has no peer as a passer, and maybe the best 1-2 punch at wide receiver with Ja'Marr Chase and Tee Higgins. He just needs to stay on the field.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Bengals	8	14	41	2.9	5.1	0

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
259	173	66.8	1,809	7.0	226.1	17	5

QB 5

JAYDEN DANIELS

WASHINGTON COMMANDERS

Daniels didn't look quite right even before his dislocated elbow last season, but he showed as a rookie that he's capable of two-way greatness. Losing offensive coordinator Kliff Kingsbury isn't a plus, but he still has ol' reliable Terry McLaurin as his top target. And Daniels remains a threat on the run.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Commanders	7	58	278	4.8	39.7	2

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
188	114	60.6	1,262	6.7	180.3	8	3

QB 6

JALEN HURTS

PHILADELPHIA EAGLES

Hurts is still a dangerous two-way threat and always capable of "tush push" touchdowns, though his ground numbers did dip last season and the Eagles' line isn't what it used to be. He still has great weapons in the passing game. New Eagles offensive coordinator Sean Mannion could end up letting Hurts run a little more.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Eagles	16	105	421	4.0	26.3	8

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
454	294	64.8	3,224	7.1	201.5	25	6

QB 7

JAXSON DART

NEW YORK GIANTS

Dart was a good passer and an outstanding runner as a rookie. And with new coach John Harbaugh expected to lean on the run, don't expect that part to change for Dart. His passing numbers will only get better if WR Malik Nabers returns healthy. Adding veteran WR Darnell Mooney will boost him, too.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Giants	14	86	487	5.7	34.8	9

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
339	216	63.7	2,272	6.7	162.3	15	5

QB 8

CALEB WILLIAMS

CHICAGO BEARS

Williams showed everyone last season why he was worthy of being the No. 1 overall pick in the 2024 NFL Draft. He was a great fit in new coach Ben Johnson's offense, and he should improve as he gets more comfortable. He's not the first option on the ground, but he can help. It's his arm that makes Williams truly dangerous.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Bears	17	77	388	5.0	22.8	3

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
568	330	58.1	3,942	6.9	231.9	27	7

QB 9

JUSTIN HERBERT

LOS ANGELES CHARGERS

Herbert is an impressive passer, but he was absolutely shell-shocked behind his terrible offensive line last season. He was forced to run more than ever last season and he still was sacked more than any other NFL quarterback. If the Chargers can keep him upright, Herbert can put up big numbers. Even with a new-look line, that's still an "if".

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Chargers	16	83	498	6.0	31.1	2

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
512	340	66.4	3,727	7.3	232.9	26	13

QB 10

TREVOR LAWRENCE

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS

Lawrence rebounded from a terrible 2024 to have the best season of his career, both passing and running. He proved to be a running threat in the red zone, too. He looks comfortable in head coach Liam Coen's offense and has quality receivers in Brian Thomas, Parker Washington and Jakobi Meyers. The arrow for him is pointed up.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Jaguars	17	82	359	4.4	21.1	9

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
560	341	60.9	4,007	7.2	235.7	29	12

QB 11

DAK PRESCOTT

DALLAS COWBOYS

Prescott is a prolific passer and the Cowboys' offense is loaded. The receiving tandem of CeeDee Lamb and George Pickens is one of the NFL's best, and Prescott has a quality offensive line in front of him. He's not the runner he once was and prefers to stay in the pocket, but he can put up big passing numbers from there.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Cowboys	17	53	177	3.3	10.4	2

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
600	404	67.3	4,552	7.6	267.8	30	10

QB 12

PATRICK MAHOMES

KANSAS CITY CHIEFS

He's now 30 now and coming off December ACL surgery, and Mahomes wasn't having a great season before he got hurt. He is still capable of greatness, but his passing numbers have been trending downward for a few years. He's not likely to run as much coming off a major injury, if he's even fully healthy for the start of the regular season.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Chiefs	14	64	422	6.6	30.1	5

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
502	315	62.7	3,587	7.1	256.2	22	11

QB 13

BROCK PURDY

SAN FRANCISCO 49ERS

He missed half of last season with turf toe, but Purdy put up impressive numbers in the passing game when he did play. He's smart and steady and now he has a legitimate No. 1 receiver after San Francisco signed Mike Evans. The 49ers also added Christian Kirk, which could help unleash Purdy to have a big season in 2026.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
49ers	9	33	147	4.5	16.3	3

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
284	197	69.4	2,167	7.6	240.8	20	10

QB 14

BO NIX

DENVER BRONCOS

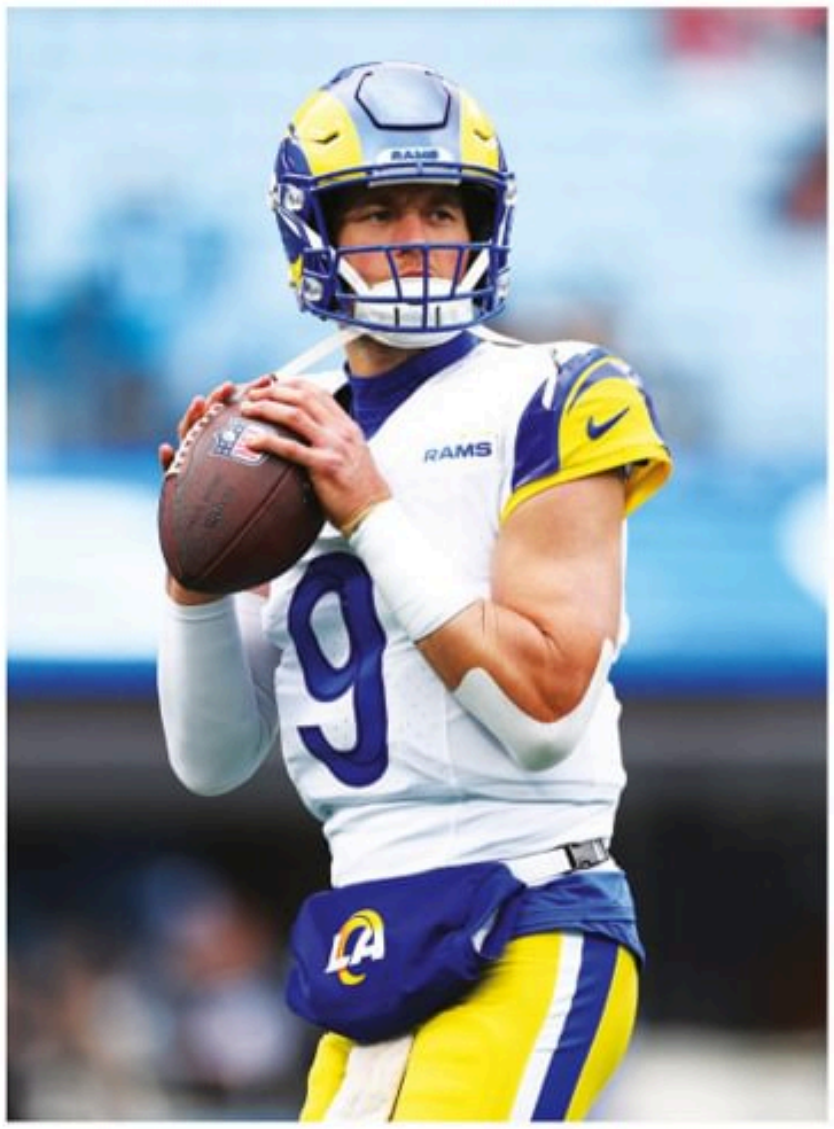
In two seasons in head coach Sean Payton's offense, Nix has been so much more than a game manager. He has carried the offense at times, even though Courtland Sutton was his only top weapon. Now he's got the elusive Jaylen Waddle too, which could mean a big leap. Nix might even finally get the respect he deserves.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Broncos	17	83	356	4.3	20.9	5

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
612	388	63.4	3,931	6.4	231.2	25	11



QB 15

MATTHEW STAFFORD

LOS ANGELES RAMS

The reigning NFL MVP is coming off the best season of his career, defying age and the nagging back injury he dealt with last summer. With wideouts Davante Adams and Puka Nacua, the Rams' passing game is loaded. The biggest worry is that Stafford is 38 years old. But if he stays healthy, he's capable of a second straight great season.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Rams	17	29	1	0.0	0.1	0

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
597	388	65.0	4,707	7.9	276.9	46	8

QB 16

JORDAN LOVE

GREEN BAY PACKERS

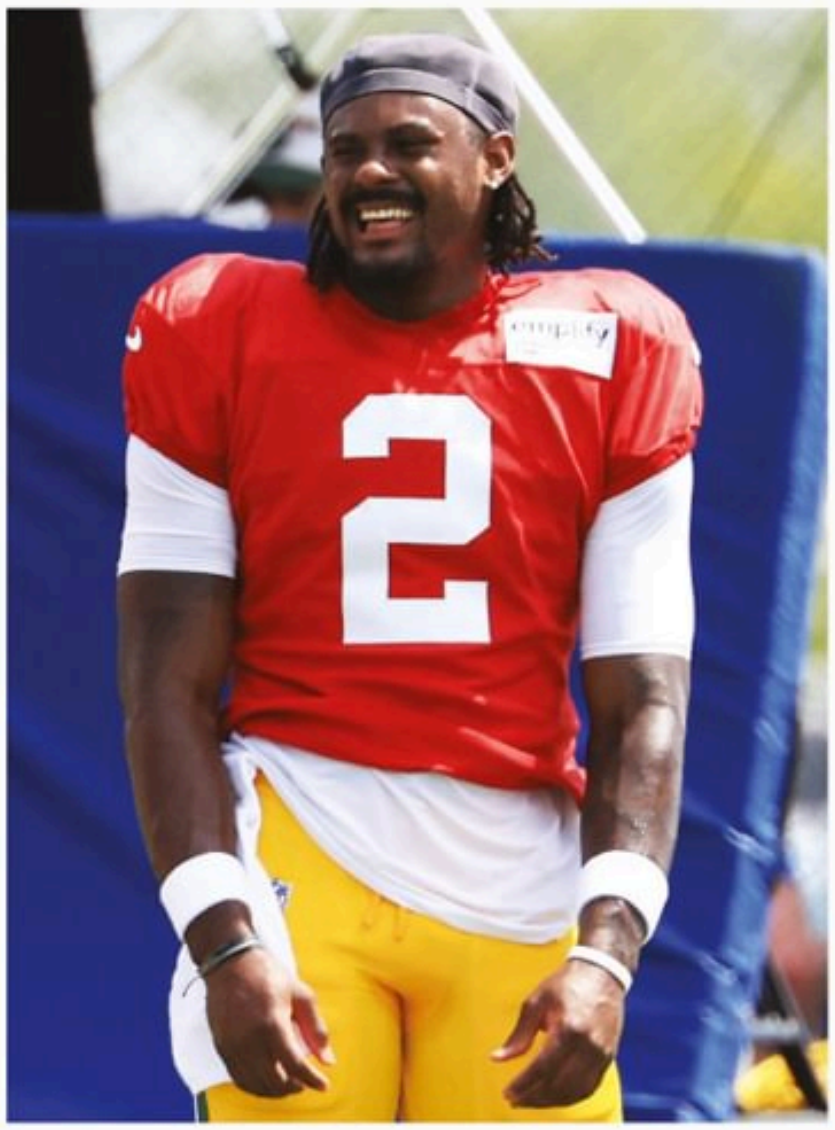
Injuries the last two seasons have kept Love from matching his elite 2023 production, but at 27 the ability is clearly still there. He's got a deep receiving corps, even without Romeo Doubs—both Christian Watson and Matthew Golden are legitimate deep threats. Everything is in place for a breakout season, as long as he's healthy.

2025 RUSHING

Team	G	Rush	Yds	Avg.	Y/G	TD
Packers	15	47	199	4.2	13.3	0

2025 PASSING

Att	Cmp	Pct.	Yards	Y/A	Y/G	TD	INT
439	291	66.3	3,381	7.7	225.4	23	6



QB 17

JARED GOFF

DETROIT LIONS

The great news is that in his first year after offensive coordinator Ben Johnson left, Goff's numbers held steady. With all those weapons around him, he's a lock for 4,000-plus yards and 30-plus touchdowns. His numbers could even get better if the Lions find a way to rediscover their mojo in the rushing attack.

QB 18

MALIK WILLIS

MIAMI DOLPHINS

Willis represents an intriguing bet for the Dolphins, based mostly on three starts over two seasons in Green Bay. He did show a lot of improvement, and he proved to be a two-way threat capable of doing a lot of running. He just won't have the same weapons around him in Miami that he did with the Packers.

QB 19

BAKER MAYFIELD

TAMPA BAY BUCCANEERS

Mayfield's numbers took a big hit in 2025, in large part because of injuries among Tampa Bay's receiving corps. He's still got a big arm, but his supporting cast won't be as robust as it had been in recent seasons. Mike Evans has departed for San Francisco, and 30-year-old Chris Godwin has battled injuries the last two seasons.

KYLER MURRAY

MINNESOTA VIKINGS

Murray landed in the perfect spot to revive his stalled career—Vikings coach Kevin O'Connell has a proven track record of resurrecting careers for veteran QBs. With a receiving corps that includes Jordan Addison and Jauan Jennings in addition to superstar Justin Jefferson, Murray has a chance to be what he once was.

TYLER SHOUGH

NEW ORLEANS SAINTS

Shough looked comfortable as a rookie after taking over as the Saints' starter in early November. He was more steady than spectacular, but that was due in part to the lack of receiving talent beyond Chris Olave. Expect Shough to benefit from New Orleans having selected Jordyn Tyson with the eighth overall pick in April's draft.

QB 22

C.J. STROUD

HOUSTON TEXANS

Stroud never looked right last season, even before his concussion. And it's concerning that his numbers have been in a freefall since his stellar rookie season. The Texans did improve the offensive line in front of him, but they haven't upgraded the weapons around him. He's only 24, however, so he's capable of getting back on track.

SAM DARNOLD

SEATTLE SEAHAWKS

After having won the Super Bowl, there's not a single person in Seattle who cares that Darnold's passing and rushing numbers both dipped in his first season with the Seahawks. So don't expect him to hit the heights he hit two years ago in Minnesota. He has proven by now that he's reliable, just not as much in fantasy as in real football.

CAM WARD

TENNESSEE TITANS

Ward had an unproductive but promising rookie season for a terrible Titans team. The addition of offensive coordinator Brian Daboll should definitely help him, as should the addition of receiver Wan'Dale Robinson along with Carnell Tate, the fourth overall pick in the 2026 NFL Draft. Ward's passing numbers will almost certainly improve.

Although he showed signs of improvement last season, Young remains far away from becoming the elite quarterback he was supposed to be when he was drafted No. 1 overall in 2023. He has room to grow under offensive-minded head coach Dave Canales and a No. 1 receiver in Tetairoa McMillan, but Young's fantasy upside remains limited.

DANIEL JONES

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS

Jones was having quite a revival season, running and passing better than he had in years before tearing his Achilles in December. He doesn't have a good history of rebounding from injuries quickly. Even with wideout Alec Pierce back, the 2026 season could be a struggle, even if Jones does prove to be fully healthy prior to Week 1.

The Heisman Trophy winner is a smart, strong-armed passer, but he's in for a big challenge in Las Vegas. Although the Raiders beefed up the offensive line to help protect Mendoza, his only real weapon is tight end Brock Bowers. Long-term, Mendoza should be a good one. Short-term, he's likely in for some growing pains.

2026 PLAYER RANKINGS

RUNNING BACKS

A LIST THAT WAS TOPPED BY SAQUON BARKLEY A SEASON AGO NOW HAS SEVERAL FIRST-ROUND OPTIONS WITH THE ABILITY TO CONTRIBUTE ON THE GROUND AND THROUGH THE AIR

RB 1

BIJAN ROBINSON

ATLANTA FALCONS

Robinson has blossomed into one of the NFL's best and most versatile backs over the past two seasons, equally explosive when running or catching the football. And he did it in an Atlanta offense that didn't have much else going for it at times. With new head coach Kevin Stefanski calling the plays, Robinson's numbers could explode in 2026.

RB 2

JAHMYR GIBBS

DETROIT LIONS

Gibbs was still the main man in the Lions' offense, even with offensive coordinator Ben Johnson gone. His numbers dipped, but they could surge in 2026 with improvements to the offensive line. It will help that the Lions traded his backfield mate, David Montgomery. It's unclear how much Isiah Pacheco will cut into Gibbs' workload.

RB 3

CHRISTIAN McCAFFREY

SAN FRANCISCO 49ERS

McCaffrey has been healthy in two of the last three seasons—when he is, there's no better dual-threat running back in the NFL. The 49ers may rely on him a little less as a receiver after signing WR Mike Evans, but McCaffrey remains the main cog in San Francisco's offense and is in line for as many touches as any running back in the league.

JONATHAN TAYLOR

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS

The best pure runner in the NFL and a machine near the goal line the last two seasons, Taylor also increased his workload as a receiver last season. The Colts may need even more from him in 2026 as QB Daniel Jones continues to recover from an Achilles tear. That's good, except that opposing defenses will also be aware of it.

In a disappointing rookie season, Jeanty showed only flashes of the power and explosiveness that had made him the sixth overall pick of the 2025 NFL Draft. But better days are ahead after Raiders bulked up the offensive line. They'll need to rely on him as they grow their new quarterback, so Jeanty could be primed for a big year.

RB 6

De'VON ACHANE

MIAMI DOLPHINS

Few backs can match Achane's speed. Even fewer can match his dual-threat capabilities. He's been a dominant receiver out of the backfield for two seasons, and last year he was one of the NFL's most productive runners. It's a plus that he did it on a bad Dolphins offense, because it's looking like they might be bad again in 2026.

JAMES COOK

BUFFALO BILLS

Nobody rushed for more yards or averaged more rushing yards per game last season than Cook, who possesses a rare combination of power and explosive speed. The biggest limitation on his production is the number of carries QB Josh Allen takes. But Cook still gets plenty, including in the red zone, and that's not likely to change.

OMARION HAMPTON

LOS ANGELES CHARGERS

A fractured ankle in Week 5 ruined Hampton's rookie season. He came back later in the year with some success, but it didn't help that the Chargers' offensive line was a mess. When healthy, Hampton is a battering ram who is tough to drag down, and potentially a major force near the goal line.

RB 9

CHASE BROWN

CINCINNATI BENGALS

He plays in a pass-first offense, but Brown has proven to be a very effective runner over the last two seasons. It's his ability to be a reliable receiver out of the backfield that makes him even more valuable to fantasy owners. With QB Joe Burrow healthy, Cincinnati's offense should be lethal in 2026, and Brown's production stands to benefit.

RB 10

SAQUON BARKLEY

PHILADELPHIA EAGLES

Barkley's numbers suffered a shocking fall from 2024, with his yards and touchdowns getting cut nearly in half. He was healthy, making it even more surprising. Maybe it was the heavy workload from the season before, or the Eagles' offensive line struggles. Barkley remains elusive, but the drop in his production is definitely reason for concern.

RB 11

KENNETH WALKER

KANSAS CITY CHIEFS

The reigning Super Bowl MVP showed what he can do when healthy, surpassing 1,000 rushing yards for the first time since he was a rookie in 2022. But now he's in Andy Reid's offense, which rarely produces 1,000-yard rushers. Maybe Reid plans to run more this season, but it's more likely Walker will see his receiving numbers increase in 2026.

GREEN BAY PACKERS

Injuries took a bite out of Jacobs' numbers last year, but he remains the workhorse the Packers envisioned when they signed him away from Las Vegas prior to the 2024 season. On a good team with a strong offense, he's capable of big rushing numbers, and he also has the ability to contribute to Green Bay's passing game.

When considering how bad the Jets' offense was last season, it's somewhat remarkable that Hall was able to surpass 1,000 rushing yards. It should be a bit better in 2026, and QB Geno Smith could give a boost to Hall's receiving numbers. Until he goes elsewhere, however, there's a cap on how productive Hall can be.

Williams has been one of the NFL's most consistent and productive runners over the last three seasons, even as he has increasingly had to share work with Blake Corum. After having limited success as a part-time back in Denver for four seasons, Williams blossomed during his first season in Dallas. NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS

The most productive stretch of Henderson's rookie season came when Rhamondre Stevenson missed three games with an injury last November. Harvey splits Denver's backfield workload with J.K. Dobbins, but Dobbins frequently misses games with injuries. Harvey was more explosive as a receiver than as a runner during his rookie season, but that could change if his workload increases. If Dobbins remains healthy, however, Harvey's fantasy upside will be somewhat limited in 2026.

The Eagles proved Swift was a No. 1 back in 2023, and he has run with that in Chicago the last two seasons. He's elusive and fast, which makes him the perfect complement to the more powerful Kyle Monangai. He's also the better receiver in head coach Ben Johnson's backfield, which will help keep Swift on the field.

An injury-plagued 2025 was disappointing after Irving's outstanding production as a rookie in 2024. Rachaad White is gone, so Irving should be Tampa Bay's primary back. He's a more powerful runner than his 5-foot-10, 195-pound frame would seem to suggest. Kenneth Gainwell, however, will likely cut into Irving's receiving numbers.

BHAYSHUL TUTEN

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS

A fourth-round pick in the 2025 NFL Draft, Tuten impressed in a limited role as a rookie and did enough that the Jaguars were comfortable letting Travis Etienne depart in free agency. Tuten may have to split carries with Chris Rodriguez, but the expectation is that the second-year back will get the bulk of Jacksonville's snaps in 2026.

CLEVELAND BROWNS

Although there was very little to like about the Browns' 2025 offensive performance, Judkins' rookie season was a bright spot. He created room to run where there wasn't much, and he was a capable receiver. The offense isn't likely to be much better, which might result in new Cleveland head coach Todd Monken riding Judkins more in 2026.

The seventh-round pick was impressive as a rookie despite being Chicago's No. 2 back. He's more like the 1A in head coach Ben Johnson's offense, where there's plenty of carries for multiple rushers. As the power back who complements the elusive D'Andre Swift, Monangai enters the 2026 season with somewhat limited fantasy upside.

He's still useful to the Patriots, but the expectation is that Stevenson will play fewer snaps in New England's backfield with TreVeyon Henderson's role likely to expand. Ja'Marr Chase

Cincinnati Bengals

Chase has put up five straight elite seasons now, and his numbers didn't take too big of a hit in 2025 despite Bengals star quarterback Joe Burrow having missed more than half the season. Chase is QB-proof and even WR Tee Higgins doesn't cut into his production. Chase averaged 126 catches the last two seasons and led the league in targets in both of those years. With a healthy Burrow, he could easily go back to his 2024 peak (127-1,708-17).

Nacua's return to health ushered in a monster season last year. Not even the addition of WR Davante Adams cut into his production. The former fifth-round pick continued to get most of the targets in the Rams' high-powered passing attack and has an unbeatable chemistry with QB Matthew Stafford. With the Rams hoping to make one last Super Bowl run, they're going to have to lean on Nacua a lot in 2026.

He was the only dangerous receiver the Seahawks had, and it didn't matter. Defenses couldn't stop him anyway. The former first-round pick proved to be elite last season, one year after his breakout, and was a dominant weapon for quarterback Sam Darnold. That won't change even with wide receiver Rashid Shaheed having been re-signed by Seattle. Smith-Njigba will be a big-play weapon in every game and is a threat to put up big numbers every week.

He's not the dominant force he was in 2023, but he's still an elite receiver capable of huge games. Lamb wasn't healthy for much of last season, and the addition of wideout George Pickens cut into his share of touches. But he is still quarterback Dak Prescott's top weapon and the Cowboys' passing attack remains the strength of the team's offense. He won't be their top guy every game, but he probably will be more often than not.

Jefferson's numbers took a nosedive last season, but that's more the fault of Minnesota's underwhelming quarterbacks. There is hope that coach Kevin O'Connell can resurrect former Cardinals quarterback Kyler Murray, which would be a huge boost to Jefferson's numbers. He got 30 percent of the targets last season, so his numbers could've been a lot better if the passes were more consistently on-target. They should be with Murray in charge.

He did it just 15 games last year, even with quarterback C.J. Stroud and the Texans' offense struggling at times. The Texans throw to Collins a lot, so if Stroud can put things together, Collins' fantasy ceiling is high. There aren't any better options in the Houston offense.

The 25-year-old is coming off his best season in all categories (100-1,163-9), which is remarkable considering his quarterbacks lacked significant NFL experience. It helped that outside of TE Juwan Johnson Olave was the only real option in the passing attack, though that could change in 2026 with the Saints having selected Jordyn Tyson No. 8 in April's draft. Olave is a perfect fit for Kellen Moore's offense, which is only going to get better with time.

The 25-year-old proved to be an explosive, big-play receiver in a prolific passing attack. That likely won't change in 2026, even with Lamb healthy for a full year.

WR 39

ALEC PIERCE

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS

He has been the best deep threat in the league, averaging an NFL-best 21.8 yards per catch over the last two seasons. But Pierce's production has been limited by a lack of targets. That should change after Indianapolis paid a fortune to keep him and traded away Michael Pittman to clear room for Pierce to shine. He enters the '26 regular season as the top target in the Colts' passing game, which should mean more targets, catches and maybe even yards.

WR 40

JORDYN TYSON

NEW ORLEANS SAINTS

Tyson is sharp and clean out of his breaks, creating separation by avoiding wasted movement and extra steps. He's a long strider who can eat up yardage quickly, erasing cushion and putting defenders on their heels. Durability could be a concern, given the fact that he's suffered injuries multiple times that have cost him a decent chunk of action in two different seasons. But he should make an immediate impact in the Saints' 2026 passing game.

JORDAN ADDISON

MINNESOTA VIKINGS

After an excellent rookie season in which the 2023 first-round pick looked like the perfect complement to Justin Jefferson, Addison has experienced a steady decline in targets, catches, yards and touchdowns. He's only 24 and loaded with talent, but there are still quarterback issues he has to deal with in Minnesota. If Kyler Murray can recapture his old form, Addison's numbers could rise. But there's a low ceiling as long as Jefferson remains healthy.

Shakir has been a solid, reliable, sure-handed target for quarterback Josh Allen, and he even has some big-play potential. But he was miscast as a No. 1 receiver in Buffalo. Thankfully, he doesn't have to be that now that the Bills have acquired D.J. Moore. That's a double-edged sword for Shakir's 2026 outlook—Moore will get the most attention in the offense, but that could end up giving Shakir room to thrive on his own.

Underwhelming over his first three NFL seasons, Johnston has averaged less than 50 catches a season. At 6-foot-2, he's a big target, especially near the goal line (16 touchdowns the last two seasons), but the Chargers need more from the former first-round NFL Draft pick. It's just not clear if the 24-year-old has more to give.

PARKER WASHINGTON

JACKSONVILLE JAGUARS

The former sixth-round pick came out of nowhere in his third NFL season, going from a part-time player to the Jaguars' best option down the stretch. Washington was targeted 41 times over Jacksonville's final four games, including the playoffs, and averaged 6.5 catches and 113.5 yards while scoring three touchdowns in that span. He guaranteed himself a bigger role in 2026, though it's unclear exactly what that will be among Jacksonville's crowded WR corps.

JAYDEN REED

GREEN BAY PACKERS

The Packers' slot receiver and former second-round pick, Reed was a solid weapon during his first two NFL seasons. But injuries limited him to just seven games last year and he wasn't particularly productive when he did play. It doesn't help him that the Packers have a big group of receivers, even allowing Romeo Doubs to depart via free agency. Reed is at least third, maybe fourth in the pecking order, which will limit his share of targets in 2026.

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS

The 5-foot-9 slot receiver has been relatively consistent while catching mostly short and mid-range passes. His volume did tick up in 2024, but was then way down with more options around him last season. The good news is that with Michael Pittman gone, there is the potential for more balls to be thrown his way. Just don't expect many big plays or targets in the red zone.

HOUSTON TEXANS

A solid rookie campaign despite a part-time role has many expecting a breakout second pro season for the former second-round pick. The 6-foot-4 receiver is only 23 years old, so there's plenty of potential there. Getting more playing time than the roughly 58 percent of the snaps Higgins got last season could be tough with Tank Dell and Xavier Hutchinson pushing him for time and with star wideout Nico Collins leading the offensive charge.

The speedy receiver touched the ball 79 times and scored nine touchdowns as a rookie and the sky seemed to be the limit for him in head coach Andy Reid's offense. But Worthy got hurt three plays into last season and neither he nor the Chiefs' attack looked like it ever really recovered. His speed makes him dangerous, though, and he could emerge as Patrick Mahomes' No. 2 target in 2026 behind Rashee Rice.

Two years ago, the former first-round pick appeared ready to fulfill his potential after his long-awaited breakout season. But his numbers plummeted last season, which turned out to be one of the most inconsistent of his career. The rightful blame goes on the Browns' quarterback mess—a big part of why Jeudy caught less than 50 percent of the passes thrown to him. TREY McBRIDE AND BROCK BOWERS SIT ATOP THE RANKINGS, BUT THEY'RE FOLLOWED CLOSELY BY A TRIO OF PROMISING YOUNG PLAYERS COMING OFF IMPRESSIVE ROOKIE SEASONS

TE 1

TREY McBRIDE

ARIZONA CARDINALS

McBride is not just the NFL's most productive tight end, but he's also one of the most effective receivers, regardless of position. His numbers have been right up there with some of the league's best wideouts the past two seasons—McBride trails only Cincinnati's Ja'Marr Chase in catches (237) and targets (316) since the start of the 2024 season. There's a chance he'll be even more productive with Mike LaFleur in as Arizona's new head coach.

TE 2

BROCK BOWERS

LAS VEGAS RAIDERS

After a brilliant rookie season, the 13th pick of the 2024 draft still put up decent numbers last year. His production was particularly impressive (64-680-7) when considering Bowers hurt his knee in Week 1, was bothered by it all season, and ended up missing five games. When he's healthy, he's an explosive, sure-handed, WR-like weapon who can transform the Raiders' offense. He'll begin the 2026 season as the clear-cut top option in the team's passing game.

For most of last season, the first-rounder was Chicago's secret. He was a good player, but Loveland was targeted an average of only 4.2 times through the first 14 games. Over the last four, including the playoffs, the rookie was targeted 12 times per game and averaged seven catches with 95 yards. His emergence as a top tight end is a big reason why the Bears felt comfortable trading veteran wideout D.J. Moore to Buffalo. Loveland will have a huge role in 2026.

The third-round pick's emergence as a Top 10 tight end was a shock last season, considering the rookie was behind David Njoku on the Browns' depth chart and was in the middle of one of the league's worst QB messes. Fannin was Cleveland's leading receiver and figures to be a focal point of new head coach Todd Monken's offense, especially with young quarterbacks who might not be able to get passes to wide receivers deeper down the field.

For three quarters of his rookie season, Warren was a top contender for Offensive Rookie of the Year. Then quarterback Daniel Jones suffered an injury and Warren's production crumbled. He still finished with solid numbers, and they should only get better if Jones can return and stay healthy. Warren also could get more targets now that the Colts traded WR Michael Pittman. He had three goal-line carries, so he has bonus value there, too.

Kraft was on his way to a breakout season following steady progress over his first two NFL years. But a torn ACL in Week 8 ended all that. When he was healthy, he was one of the league's most productive tight ends. He also showed breakaway capability, averaging 15.3 yards per catch, and he was a big scoring threat with six touchdowns over those eight games. When healthy, Kraft is one of the best.

He's still one of the NFL's best, but it's a bit worrisome that LaPorta's combined production over the last two seasons (100-1,215-10 in 25 games) isn't much better than what the second-round pick did in 17 games as a rookie. It's not a huge regression, but it's one to be concerned about, especially as he recovers from November back surgery. If he's healthy, though, LaPorta will still play a significant role in Detroit's passing game.

It has taken a long time for Pitts to fulfill the potential he showed as a rookie after he was the fourth overall pick in the 2021 draft, but he started to do it last season. The Falcons gave him a career-high 118 targets and he responded with a career-high 88 catches. That should encourage new coach Kevin Stefanski to lean on Pitts even more in 2026. The unsettled quarterback situation in Atlanta, however, could hold him back.

Reliable in the passing game, Ferguson caught 74 percent of his targets over his first four seasons. The former fourth-round pick even had a career-high 82 catches and eight touchdowns last year. He's a short-range target, though, so he'll never put up big yards. And with two No. 1 receivers around him in CeeDee Lamb and George Pickens, Ferguson is not a high priority in the Cowboys' passing game. But as explosive as that offense is, he'll always get enough work.
